Lenexa, KS – Kansas Business Investment Company, a private investment firm (KBIC), announced today the acquisition of Security Control Systems, Inc., which is headquartered in Houston, Texas. Terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Founded over 37 years ago, Security Control Systems, Inc. (SCS) has grown to be recognized as a first-class security integration company. SCS is a full-service provider of integrated security management systems specializing in complex electronic control systems that generally incorporate access control, closed circuit television surveillance, audio intercommunication, and proprietary alarm monitoring systems. The true specialty of SCS is integration of two or more of these subsystems into one complete and easy to operate package with all subsystems being highly integrated and easy to manage.

“[KBIC] brings to the SCS team new leadership, management talent, sales and other resources that will ensure and enhance the capability of SCS to continue to provide its customers with world class security solutions,” said Bill Savage, owner and President of SCS. Savage further said that he expects the deal “to expand opportunities for our employees and benefit the vendors that have shown us so much loyalty over the decades.”

Sandra Jones and Company, a boutique M&A brokerage focused on the physical security industry, represented SCS as financial advisor in the transaction, which was effective July 17, 2020.
